President ought to be impeached and removed for "the good of the country," and having an unlimited faith in the power of money for the accomplischment of good purposes, that he amounced his willingness to advance a large sum of money for the vote necessary to secure that object. Mr. Legate was the "bearer of dispatches" to this as in other negotiations. A Mr. Shaeffer, friend of the Hom H. F. Buller, can also tell something about this matter. money to purchase Legate's silence. This is Legate's story, given to us by himself, with authority to use it. The essential facts are also substantially corroborated by Mr. Cooper.

Failing in his negotiations with Mr Johnson, Pomercy takes a "new derparture." He suddenly becomes intensely zealous for conviction. So thoroughly convinced had he become, on the failure to secure ready money, that the President ought to be impeached and removed for "the good of the country," and having an unlimited faith in the power of money for the accomplishtions of this kind; but of them hereafter.

We say Mr. Pomercy proposed to "advance" this sum, and could well af-no sooner had the senate adjourned on that day, than the house appointed a committee to inquire into our conduct in keeping our own counsel and voting as we pleased, with the expectation, in the fiarce passion and hate of the hour, of securing our expulsion from the senate,

The following good story is told of Mozart at the time when he was a pupil zart to compose a piece of music which he could not play at sight. Mozart accepted the banter, and a champagne supper was to be the forfeit. Every-thing being arranged between the two composers, Mozart took his pen and a sheet of paper, and in five minutes dashed off a piece of music, and much to the surprise of Haydn, handed it to him, saying: "There is a piece of mu-can play such music—not even the composer himself." Mozart smiled at the half-excited indignation and perplexity of the great muster; and taking the seat he had quitted struck the instrument

The ceremony of choosing compadres and comrades for the coming year—a custom peculiar to the people of Spain and Mexico—is to be performed on the and Mexico—is to be performed on the advent of the new year by some of the ladies of this city. The custom is no old one: and its origin dates back many years. The manner of its performance is as follows. The names of ladies and gentlemen known to be mutually acquainted are written upon slips of paper and deposited in hats, the name of a lady being drawn simultaneously from one hat with that of a gentleman from another, the two whose manner are thus NOW IS THE TIME TO BUY
